"The Spendthrift."
Porter Emerson Browne's remarkable social drama, "The Spendthrift," which will be the attraction at the Academy Christmas matinee and night brings up some of the most interesting social problems before the world to-day.

The play is one of ideas, and depicts certain phases of life which are to be found in many American homes. It tells the story of the wreck of a family's happiness, brought about by the divergence of thought and the different paths followed in the pursuit of happiness by a husband and wife. Richard Ward is a man of working, saving and home-loving instincts. His wife longs for luxuries and in his love for her and his efforts to gratify her, with them he is kept grinding.

Chance Willing to Pay $5,000 Bonus to Ebbets for His Tinker Bargain

Los Angeles, Cal., December 23.—While discussing the proposed transfer of Joe Tinker from Cincinnati to Brooklyn, Frank Chance made the statement that he would give Charles Ebbets, the Brooklyn manager, $5,000 bonus for his bargain. He added that if Ebbets would consider such an offer, he would be delighted to turn over the cash without delay. "Tinker is worth every dime of the $25,000 that Ebbets is reported to have offered for him," said Chance. "Joe is a high class player, and well worth that sort of money. If Ebbets doesn't think so, he will do me a favor by allowing me to pay him a $5,000 bonus for his bargain, for such it is. I do not think that Tinker would go to the outlays if his demands were not met regarding the $10,000 bonus he wants for signing, but he has an intense nature, and there is no telling what he would do."

ing and toiling under a mountain of debt which topples over on him, and he is bankrupt. One of the most appealing points in the play is while the wife's extravagance is dominant, it is brought about in a great measure through her sincere endeavor to provide her husband with a home befitting the position in life she believes him big enough to occupy. When she realizes that he is bankrupt she borrows money in an effort to save him. This move on her part leads to dramatic situations, the unraveling of which has made "The Spendthrift" not only a problem play of real life to-day, but with its motive an arraignment of puritan society life, but a drama which thousands who have seen it have declared "strikes home in a most impressive and interesting way."

JOINT RESOLUTION TO SUSPEND FREE TOLLS PROVISION

was a violation of a treaty, they would not insist upon the exemption. It was a leading exponent on the floor of the House suggested that the objection be made and that if England objected that a case be made for determination at The Hague. Since that exemption was made that gentleman and others of his associates object to arbitration at all.

This resolution proposes two things. First, an experimental test to demonstrate whether or not the tolls pay the expenses of operating the canal, exclusive of the tolls of the coastwise trade, and the other is to afford opportunity to adjust all questions of harmony touching the tolls. Assuming that the advocates of exemption were sincere in their contention on these two propositions, it should not prove embarrassing to them at all, nor be regarded as any abandonment of their position to pass this resolution to test the correctness of the two contentions in the two propositions.
